Fund Manager comments

Echiquier Convexit  SRI Europe A turned in a positive monthly performance of 1.17% and of 1.75% year-to-date.

The first quarter ended with a third consecutive month of gains for risky assets, with many equity markets hitting all-time highs. Investors seem reassured by a combination of good news on the macroeconomic front and in terms of corporate results. Echiquier Convexit  SRI Europe has performed well, buoyed both by the rise in its equity underlyings and by the tightening of credit spreads, while implied volatility continues its long, slow erosion. The fund benefited in particular from SPIE's very good results, with a 2023 growth/margins ratio above expectations and an upwardly revised outlook rewarding the excellent work of management. There was just one issue of note in March: the Citigroup exchangeable bond into LVMH 2029 for  375 million. We took part in this placement, which we saw as an attractive alternative to our position in the JPM exchangeable bond for LVMH 2024, which had moved out of its convexity zone with an equity sensitivity of over 90%. This profit-taking maintains the fund's cautious characteristics in a market that will be looking for a new direction.
